Who Is Coughlin, What Is His Program, How Did He Rise?

Aided by Big Business, America's Number One Fascist Rose from Obscurity to Lead a Movement

> By JOSEPH HANSEN INSTALLMENT III

Coughlin Opposes Social Security

Yes, Coughlin is thoroughly devoted to capitalism. He opposes capitalism granting even the slightest concession

To guarantee food and clothing to a laboring man and his family when some sordid capitalist throws him out of a job would threaten the capitalist structure Father Cough-

"Studying it (the Social Security Act) closely, one discovers that basically it is socialistic in its conception and aims. It is socialism of the old school; socialism that offers a remedy more disastrous than the threatened evil; socialism that demands we take from those who have and give to those who have not." (Social Justice, October 17, 1938.)

In the same editorial he advocates giving everyone an "annual living wage" instead of Social Security.

What Father Coughlin considers an "annual living wage" in dollars he does not state. It must be less than social security to gain his approval!

And what would be wrong with giving a decent annual living wage (not less than $2,500 at present cost of living) and Social Security? A labor government could easily obtain that as a minimum for the workers in the richest land on the face of the earth.

Coughlin Favors Regimentation of Labor

The industrial barons have long been struggling to enact changes into the Wagner Act which would benefit them. Coughlin backs up the changes they want. There must be "no conflict" between labor and the employers, Coughlin says. "National unity" is what he wants.

"Make the United States Department of Labor a real power. Let it take over the functions of collective bargaining-the functions which the American Federation of Labor is now trying to fulfill. Let it supplant the A. F. of L. entirely." (Interview published in the Detroit Times, October 10, 1934.)

Does this sound like giving labor the right to organize? What Coughlin advocates in the quotation above is exactly what Mussolini and Hitler advocated and what they put into effect.

Concentration camps, forced labor, prisons, starvation, endless hours for labor-this is what Father Coughlin's plan means.

Father Coughlin Favors War

Father Coughlin claims that he is opposed to war. But close attention to his words shows that he is opposed only to war against Germany and Italy at the present time. And even on this point he will shift quickly enough when the war actually breaks. He supported Roosevelt's war program once before. It will not be difficult for him to flop back again during the war hysteria and cry sternly over his network: "Roosevelt's War or Ruin!"

There is no dearth of statements he has made on this point too, disclosing his real views.

On January 19, 1930, in the discourse entitled "Christ or the Red Fog," Coughlin attacked a Milwaukee students' conference for adopting a resolution opposing war. He condemned the students because:

They are unwilling to assist in building up a better navy and a stronger army to protect a country where Christ is still a King." (Father Charles E. Coughlin, p. 68.)

Coughlin is not less devoted to capitalism and private property than Roosevelt. He too wants a big navy and a big army. He too wants unemployed youth marching behind bayonets.

The Fine Art of Jew-Baiting

So incensed are the American workers at the unparalleled brutality with which Hitler has persecuted the Jews, and so great has been the wave of sympathy for them that Coughlin has attempted to deny that he is a Jew-baiter.

We disavow all participation with those who hate Jews because they are Jews. . . . " (Social Justice, May 1, 1939.) "If and when anti-Semitism shows its ugly head here. I shall be the first, without hope of receiving reward to condemn it both by voice and deed." (Reprinted in Social Justice, May 1, 1939.)

But a fascist movement if it is to be successful must have a scapegoat on whom the frenzied masses can vent their rage in place of the capitalists who deserve it. (Naturally the capitalists pay well for this service.) And so Coughlin too must have a scapegoat. Coughlin like Hitler and Mussolini has selected the Jew for his scapegoat.

In order to maintain that he is not anti-Semitic, he divides Jews into two categories. Five per cent of them are religious, he postulates. This five per cent he favors-and if they are ever persecuted, he declares, you will find him in their front ranks! The other ninety-five per cent, he says, are not religious. They are communists, socialists, atheists, international bankers, and dealers in gold. In fact Father Coughlin does not pause at words far more lurid than these in marking the Jews for victims on the reeking

At the very height of Hitler's persecution of the Jews, when the whole world watched horrified, and even reactionaries scurried to place themselves on record as opposing this persecution, Father Coughlin defended Hitler's bloody pogrom and attacked the Jewish victims. (Radio speech, November 20, 1938.)

Congress Committee Accepts Bill Lopping Billion from W.P.A.

$1.57 per week is enough for any unemployed person to eat, house, drink and be merry-so says President Roosevelt and so say after him the reactionary members of the House Appropriations Subommittee.

Twenty-two cents a day for all the needs of a human being! That is the concrete, horrible meaning of the 1940 relief bill introduced Wednesday into Congress by the House Appropriations Subcommittee, embodying the main recommendations on relief made by President Roose velt in his April 27 relief mes sage to Congress.

The Sub-committee's bill accepted Roosevelt's proposed figure for W.P.A. for the fiscal year which begins July 1: $1,477,000,000, which is far more than a billion dollars less than the amount allotted to the W.P.A. in the current year, which was $2,539,805,000. By Roosevelt's own computation, the most his figure would per mit is a total of 2,000,000 W.P.A jobs during the year beginning July 1-500,000 fewer jobs than those actually working on W.P.A. today, and 1,350,000 fewer than were working in November, 1938. Labor Candidates Poll Huge Vote

Shows Labor Has Reformed Political Ranks Since Gubernatorial Defeat—Several Candidates on Labor Slate Elected

(Special to the Socialist Appeal)

MINNEAPOLIS, June 13-Organized labor made a great comeback in Monday's city elections, almost but not quite wiping out the crushing advances made by the Republican machine eight months ago.

T. A. Eide, the labor candidate for mayor, received 74,962 votes, losing by only 7,257 to the incumbent, Mayor Leach.

The extraordinary significance of this vote can be understood by comparing it to the gubernatorial elections eight months ago, when Farmer-Labor Governor Benson lost to the Republican Stassen by over 250,000 votes in the state, with comparable figures for Minneapolis.

capitalist opponent, and Stanley Anderson, in the tenth, won over his opponent by 9,106 to 5,521. Another laborite, John Nelson, carried the eleventh ward and, in the twelfth, Mike Foley lost to the reactionaries by only 221 votes.

The returns show that Eide carried a majority of the city's thirteen wards. Eide won out in the first, third, sixth, ninth, tenth, eleventh and twelfth. It was the fourth, seventh, eighth and thirteenth that won for Leach, particularly the uppermiddle class eighth and thirteenth. Leach polled 21,970 votes from these two wards,

The unions had been able to break down several of the border wards. The second, always Leach by less than a thousand got less than 800 majority.

Extent of Comeback

When, last November, the are which two years before had won by a quarter of a million votes, instead lost by an equal number, and that half-million paralleled in Minneapolis, political commentators predicted that the Farmer-Labor Partyparty movements - would be dead for years in Minnesota.

Yet, a scant eight months later, the trade union movement has been able to re-form (Continued on Page 2)

How George Dobbin Lost His Job

I am turning over this column to a guest conductor: George Dobbin, one of the Southern workers who tell their life stories in These Are Our Lives, an extremely interesting compilation made by the Federal Writers Project and published by the University of North Carolina Press. The story begin in the boom years of the War:

"Mills was beginnin' to pay good," George continued. "It wa'n't long till I was makin'

"We done some good livin' then," Sally remarked. "It seemed like we never had to study and contrive so hard. I could buy all the milk my children needed.'

"Groceries kept agoin' up," George began again, "and they took up most of the wages, but then we did have enough to eat."

"In 1919 we moved to Durham and first thing I knowed I was makin' from 25 to 35 dollars a week. Times stayed good with us up to '21. When I say times was good, I don't meant we done no fancy livin' atall but we sat down to the table three times a day and always found somethin' on it.

"Then one day I went in the mill and seen a notice tellin' of a twenty-five percent cut and a shortenin' of time to three days a week. Hard times really set in like always but groceries never come down accordin' to the cut."

"Them was miserable days for us," Sally declared, "and many a time my little ones cried for milk." "And when it began to look like the livin'

MEN AND WOMEN OF LABOR

UT OF THE PAST

brought his release.

VINCENT ST. JOHN (1873-June 21, 1929)

(The following account of a great fighter's life is from an article written at the time of St. John's death by James P. Cannon, National Secretary of the Socialist Workers Party (The Militant, July 1, 1929). Comrade Cannon worked with St. John in the glorious days of Wobbly militancy and activity.)

The death of Vincent St. John at San Francisco marks the passing of another of the great figures of the American revolutionary movement whose deeds helped to make its tradition and whose names will not be forgotten. "The Saint." as he was known to those who knew and loved him, died at the age of 56 after a long illness complicated by high blood pressure. He will be sincerely mourned by thousands whose lives were influenced by him. particularly by those who belonged to the old guard of the I.W.W. in its bravest days when he was its moving spirit and guiding intelli-

Vincent St. John, like Haywood and Frank Little, was trained in the hard school of the Western Federation of Miners, that model labor union whose mighty struggles threw their shadow across the world in the latter years of the Nineteenth Century and the first years of the Twentieth. A metal miner by trade, he joined the Western Federation in 1894, and became one of the most militant fighters in its ranks and an influential voice in its councils. Despite his modesty of disposition, his freedom from personal ambition and his lack of the arts of self-aggrandizement. his work spoke loudly and brought him widespread fame. His stirring deeds as a pioneer organizer became legends of the movement and remain such today. Until 1907 he was a member of the executive board of the W.F.M. and in that strategic position became the leader of the left wing in the looming struggle between conservative and revolutionary unionism which centered around the question of affiliation to the I.W.W. which the Western Federation had played a role in founding in

Led "Direct Actionists"

At the second convention of the I.W.W. in 1906 St. John headed the revolutionary syndicalist group which combined with the S.L.P. elements to oust Sherman, a conservative, as President and to establish a new administration in the organization with a revolutionary policy. He became the general organizer under the new administration, breaking with the W.F.M. on the withdrawal of the latter body. and giving his whole allegiance to the I.W.W. He presided at the 1908 convention which saw the split with the S.L.P. and the elimination of the "political clause" from the preamble. St. John was the leader of the proletarian "Direct Action" forces which defeated the "political" wing of De Leon. Thereafter he served as General Secretary of the I.W.W. until 1914, and undoubtedly did more than anyone to shape its course and prepare the ground for its later development under the active leadership of Haywood.

He withdrew from activity on leaving the office of General Secretary and engaged in a mining enterprise, doubtless with the illusory hope of acquiring a fortune to help finance the organization of the workers. Despite his retirement at the period, fear of his abilities, and the prospect of his return to the office vacated by the imprisonment of Haywood, dictated his own arrest and subsequent conviction with the Chicago group of I.W.W. wartime prisoners. He served two and a half

By EMANUEL GARRETT years at Leavenworth before commutation

From his earlier concepts of revolutionary socialism St. John, in revolt against the parliamentary reformism of the Socialist Party and the sectarian, ultra-legal concepts of the Socialist Labor Party, developed along the line of revolutionary syndicalism, the path taken by many of the best proletarian fighters of the period. In many respects this represented a step forward from parliamentary socialism, but the prejudices and theoretical falsity of the syndicalist or industrialist position were storing up disasters for the future. The philosophy of the I.W.W., which St. John did so much to shape, was too simple for the complex situation brought about by the entry of the United States into the World War. The great sacrifices and heroic deeds of its members were unavailing against this handicap and were greatly discounted by it. The spirit of the I.W.W. died in the war, and not the least of the signs of this tragedy was the loss of faith of practically the entire body of the old guard which had made its history and its glory. St. John was among them. Spiritual death is the real death of revolutionaries.

To the great loss of the workers' cause, St. John, and with him the great majority of the leading militants of the I.W.W., failed to make the theoretical and tactical adjustments necessitated by the experience of the World War and the Russian Revolution. Their limited industrialist concepts remained unchanged. Communism, especially its American representatives, impressed them unfavorably and they could not swim with the current of the new movement. The enormous errors, presumptiousness and tactlessness of the Communist party leadership are partly responsible for this calamitous state of affairs. American communism should have been a natural growth out of the soil of the pre-war movement represented in part by the I.W.W. The early years of the Party were weakened and hampered by this failure and the I.W.W. movement, alienated from Communism, lost its old time vigor and passed into an inevitable degeneration and decline.

A Tradition to Be Valued

But despite the tragedy of the after-war years, the earlier work of the I.W.W. militants-and St. John in the front rank-retains all its validity. They wrote much of the tradition of the American revolutionary move- to reawaken desire for militant the strikes of the last few ment in letters of fire that will never be extinguished. For those who knew the "Saint" as a man and friend, his untimely death brings a deep and poignant grief. He was a most admirable personality-brave and resolute, loyal and honest. He was a gifted and inspiring leader and organizer who gave himself, throughout the years of youth and manhood prime, untiringly and unsparingly to the workers' cause. And with the highest executive qualities he combined the rare gift of friendship, of warmly human consideration and concern for others, of loyalty in personal relations, which bound men to him in life-long affection. Those who were so bound to him, who knew the warmth of his handclasp, enshrine his memory in their hearts along with the best memories of the great cause for which we live and Here Martin's red-baiting reactionary program slapped him in the face. In these plants Martin had gathered around him all the worst reactionary and anti-union elements. These men are against militant action of any kind, and refused to support Martin's strike under any circumstances, having joined with him only to indulge in redbaiting and class-collaboration. These men are no longer Martin men, but have dropped back into their original roles of company stooges and finks.

Toward the Party Convention

New Directions Require New Methods of Party Work

A revolutionary party begins with an idea, and the idea-that is, the program-becomes an all-conquering power capable of transforming society when it permeates the mass. The work of attracting the masses to the revolutionary program does not proceed along a straight line by the simple repetition of propaganda. If that were so, working class politicians would not be necessary; a good phonograph-or a sectarian, which is the same thing -would suffice. The struggle for the support of the majority of the working class, the prerequisite for the socialist victory, is an extremely complicated struggle, and one which, moreover, is constantly changing and constantly imposing shifts in emphasis and different methods of work. It is necessary to keep a clear view of the goal but that alone is not enough. The art of revolutionary politics consists in recognizing the most favorable immediate objective and of concentrating, according to the military motto, all forces on the point of attack. Only thus is it possible to move for-

Lenin spoke of the necessity of seizing the right link in the chain. And Trotsky crammed all practical political wisdom into a single sentence when he said the most important of all questions is, what to do next. The tactical orientation of the moment depends on what is necessary and what is possible at the moment.

The Way Is Cleared

Our goal is and has been always the samethe winning over of the masses for the revolutionary struggle for power. It was the same in our formative days when we disregarded the "mass work" windbags, as later when we turned to broader fields of political activity and broke with the sectarians. If we say today, with at least the formal agreement of the whole party, that our work must now be concentrated directly on mass work it is because the road has been cleared for such a turn. The rather sad fact that our practices in this reand passed, was quashed by spect have by no means caught up with our resolutions does not signify any intention on cause the action might possibly our part to deceive ourselves by our unanihave led to a little trouble with mous declarations. We mean what we say and will learn how to act accordingly.

Nobody at the convention will argue against Automobile Workers was not the necessity of a full concentration on mass built with this kind of a craven work. Nobody will propose that we go back bellycrawling attitude, but by and chew the fat once again with the sectarian cliques who have theorized themselves into a secluded corner and remain there to everybody's satisfaction-their own, and ours and that of the world at large. It is unimaginable that anyone should suggest that we go back and fight over again the factional struggle within a common organization with the Thomasite "socialists." That chapter is finished. What was once alive and revolutionary there belongs now to the American section of the Fourth International.

As for the spurious "unity" campaign of the ing Full Blast on Lovestoneites—is it possible that any member of our party can be caught on this hook? Hardly. This petty strategem of the Lovestoneite leadership - as transparently crooked as its authors-is designed only as artificial stimulation for a doomed and dwindling sect without program or prospects or good repute, and a cover-up for the real object of the maneuver -unity with the Socialist Party and the Social Democratic Federation. No, there is nothing sharply calls to attention the ors Union and asked the Section us. Let the Lovestoneites unite if they wish with the Thomasites and the flagwaving Social-democrats. That is their affair, when there was no crew on the and we have no objection; they all need a bit of "unity", God knows. But let us attend to our own work-the penetration of the workers' mass movement.

> I repeat, if we have not been about this business it is not from lack of conviction as to its necessity. It is simply that we hesitate-or don't know how-to begin in earnest. We have more faith than works and faith without works

The situation within the radical labor movement has been long since ripe for a decisive turn to mass work, and the objective circumstances are becoming increasingly favorable. What is lacking, primarily, is the necessary psychological readjustment and change in methods of work imposed by the new tasks. The expert programmatic critics, propagandists and internal faction fighters of yesterday-that's what we were and that's what we needed to be in the conditions of the timehave not yet mastered the art of mass agitation and of simple day to day work in the trade unions and other mass organizations. Too many of our comrades, who can debate any question of the program at the drop of the hat, find difficulty in speaking the language of the unschooled worker who is ready for action and willing to learn.

This is not said to disparage those who have mastered the program and the ability to defend it against all opponents, nor to contrast educational work to mass agitation. Far from it. It is a question rather of supplementing the one with the other. The problem which presses hard today and will press harder tomorrow is to interpret and expound the program in such a way as to enable wider circles of workers, hitherto unacquainted with Marxist doctrine, to understand it and act upon it. That is an art which we must learn. We must put ourselves to school in the living movement of the workers. To do that we must get into it. In spite of everything the water remains the only place where one can learn to swim.

Learning by Doing

The workers' mass movement is the source of power, and also of compensating inspiration and enthusiasm for those revolutionary militants who intelligently participate in it. It will see it demonstrated once again at the convention - that those comrades who are learning by doing in the mass movement are the least tainted with pessimism and discouragement, that sickness of isolated, helpless and hopeless people who contemplate life without living it and see the world mirrored by their own weakness.

The convention will do well to listen attentively to those comrades who come fresh from active participation in the recent class battles —the Briggs strike at Detroit, militant actions of the unemployed at Flint, the epic struggle of the seamen on the Pacific coast, the magnificent campaign for the independent labor ticket in Minneapolis. The invincible power of the laboring mass in action communicates its enthusiasm and its confidence to its participants and they, in turn, will help to communicate it to the convention of the party and determine its spirit and orientation.

We have every right to confidence in our future, for we alone, out of a 15-year period of unprecedented defeat and disintegration, have fought a way forward. Beginning with nothing but a revolutionary program and a handful of people, we have become a movement, if as yet but a small one, and have swept all rivals from the field. Our party is the sole organization of the revolutionary vanguard. Our programmatic disputes with the futile sectarians of the right as well as the pseudo-left-unavoidable in the struggle to clarify the doctrine of the movement and sift out the basic cadres, although they cost us precious years of time and effort - are finished and done. They are things of yesterday and we shall not return to them. Nothing is more foolish than to chase a street car after it has been caught.

The Road Is Pointed

Our road now points directly to the mass movement and to the recruiting of hundreds and thousands where once we counted our new adherents in ones and twos. If we have been suffering a certain stagnation, which we do not conceal from ourselves or others, it is primarily because we have not yet made the necessary readjustment of our work to new times and new conditions. From all indications there is every reason to be confident that the convention will survey the situation realistically and give the signal for a speedier readjustment.

I have not mentioned the struggle against the Stalinist Party as one of the tasks that are behind us nor one that can be separated from effective work in the broad workers' mass movement. Indeed, it is precisely in the trade unions that our militants encounter the Stalinist machine as the greatest obstacle and the greatest enemy. Profoundly wrong are those comrades who, in their commendable zeal to concentrate all activity on trade union work. try to jump over the Stalinist obstacle and "constructive work" to the unrelenting frontal attack against the party directed by degenerate turncoats. The party must be clear on this. Otherwise it will not succeed in the mass movement. I will take up this question in my

Minneapolis Elections

T. A. Eide, organized labor's candidate for Mayor in last Monday's Minneapolis elections, was hardly known to anyone except active trade unionists before his nomination. All the more significant are the 75,000 votes cast for him, but a few thousand short of victory.

All the more significant were these votes, too, in the face of disastrous defeats of labor-endorsed candidates throughout the country during the last year, in the face of the indubitable growth of reaction. All the more significant in contrast to Farmer-Labor Governor Benson's annihilating defeat last November.

The key to understanding Eide's splendid run is to understand why a half million voters who were for Benson in 1936 were for the Republican Stassen in November, 1938. Two years of the New Deal had intervened; all its promises had proved empty, and the New Deal had become the War Deal. When the labor movement, instead of presenting its own candidates, backed the War Deal, millions of votes that would have gone for independent labor candidates were instead cast against the status quo; and since the only alternative to the status quo was the Republicans, these deluded millions voted Repub-

The Minneapolis trade union municipal campaign represented the widening rift between labor support and the War Deal-a move from Rooseveltism to independent class action. That break was not clearly etched in positive terms, but the tendency was indicated by programmatic demands on issues which the War Deal has ducked - jobs and relief, housing, rights of unions, etc. Almost all the candidates were active trade unionists. Unfortunately an apparatus had to be built overnight, and on a temporary basis, for the old Farmer-Labor Party was dead and the unions were not ready for a permanent Labor Party organization, many union leaders hoping to re-organize the Farmer-Labor Party on a state basis afterward. But essentially the municipal campaign was a great step forward in presenting independent labor political action as the real alternative to the War Deal.

Equally significant is it to understand that in making this turn from being a tail to the War Deal to standing at the head of the oppressed masses, the labor movement will find its most perfidious opponent to be the Communist Party. That organization, which is neither communist nor a party, is the most frenzied supporter of the War Deal, and will leave no stone unturned in destroying an independent Labor Party move-

A Stalinist dispatch dated June 12-the day before the election—to the Daily Worker says that "Trotskyite activity has weakened the progressive campaign" - how? By "constantly claiming that the united progressive ticket is a 'trade union.slate' "! And the next day the Stalinist sheet had the effrontery to report that "the narrow gap that separated the progressives from victory . . . resulted mainly from the failure to make clear to the people of the city that the Farmer-Labor candidates defended the New Deal objectives." The argument itself is of course beneath contempt, for precisely because he identified himself with the New Deal, Benson was annihilated and with him the Farmer-Labor Party last November. But what is significant is that the Stalinists are so determined to keep organized labor yoked to the War Deal that they will do anything, literally anything, to maintain, that yoke. Anything includes sabotaging a campaign whch, like Eide's, was a break away from the War Deal and a step toward an independent Labor Party program.

As in the task of furthering militant tactics in the trade unions for economic demands, so in the task of militant labor politics, the trade union movement can advance only as it rids itself of the syphilis of Stalinism.

Hague and the C.I.O.

Following the anti-Hague decision of the Supreme Court and the more or less undisturbed meeting of the Civil Liberties Union in Jersey City, the liberals and the labor bureaucratic friends of the Democratic party have again filled the air with their praises of the Supreme Court, the virtues of democracy and the burial of Mayor Hague.

We've heard that before, in fact every time some court, or some statesman signed his name to what immediately became a scrap of paper in Hague's domain. Hague did not come into power by means of solemn and imposing sheets of paper, and he will not be unseated that way. He rose to power because he represented a growingly aggressive organized force, with a clearcut, unambiguous anti-labor program. He can be smashed, and labor's rights restored in Jersey City, only by an equally militant, organized force, with an equally clear-cut, unambiguous pro-labor program.

The secretary of the New Jersey Industrial Union Council, C.I.O., who apparently knows the situation a little better than some of his starry-eyed fellow officials, was, according to the C.I.O. News Service, "skeptical about the decision's ability to take the sting out of Hague's vehement anti-unionism."

"The Supreme Court decision will help a lot," he said, "but it will drive Hague underground. There he will try to mobilize his supposed-to-be veterans and his other stooges to foment trouble against us.

Secretary Goldsmith is substantially correct. Hague is not demobilizing his reactionary mobsters. They are still on tap-functioning a little less ostentatiously for a time, perhaps - prepared to maintain Hague in power and keep labor under their heel.

To try facing these mobsters with a copy of Supreme Court paper is foolhardy as well as futile. Hagueism, like fascism in general, can be smashed only by mobilizing the militant, trained forces of the labor movement.

And that means: Union Defense Guards, the shield of labor in its resistance to reaction's

Martin Dies' Ideal

In his May report to his National Committee, Earl Browder, party secretary, who looks under his bed each night for "Trotskyist and Lovestoneite spies", describes them as follows:

"They are impatient for 'revolutionary action'; their talk runs to 'blood and thunder'; they are the advocates of 'violent overthrow of the government' who are Martin Dies' ideal of

We pick up a book called State and Revolution issued in a new edition by Browder's publishing house seven years ago. The author of the book was a man named Lenin. Also, he was a Communist and, if we may say so, a genuine

On page 18, Lenin writes:

"Fifthly, in the same work of Engels, from which every one remembers his argument on the 'withering away' of the state, there is also a disquisition on the significance of a violent revolution. The historical analysis of its role becomes, with Engels, a veritable panegyric on violent revolution. This, of course, 'no one remembers'; to talk or even to think of the importance of this idea is not considered good form by contemporary socialist parties [Hear, hear, Browder!], and in daily propaganda and agitation among the masses it plays no part

"It [the bourgeois state] cannot be replaced by the proletarian state (the dictatorship of the proletariat) through 'withering away' but, as a general rule, only through a violent revolution.' Again, on the same page:

"The necessity of systematically fostering among the masses this and just this point of view about violent revolution lies at the root of the whole of Marx's and Engels' teaching. The neglect of such propaganda and agitation by both the present predominant social-chauvinist and the Kautskyist currents brings their betrayal of Marx's and Engels' teaching into prominent relief. The replacement of the bourgeois by the proletarian state is impossible without a violent Browder ends his report by saying that "we have the party for which they [the people] have been looking, a party worthy of our great principles and aims, a party worthy of Marx, Engels, Lenin and Stalin.'

If only he had left out the names of Marx, Engels and Lenin, he would have been literally and scientifically exact.

The espionage work, he declares, has been carried out for some time without the knowledge of the party membership, of even the whole leadership which is supposed to direct all the work of the party and its secretary. "This knowledge is the result of intensive investigation by the National Committee, without engaging the whole Party membership or even the leading cadres in a spy hunt. LOSING GROUND ON MANY FRONTS

The Stalinists have been losing ground on many fronts, including the trade unions, and the revulsion against their reactionary policies is producing the inevitable reaction in the DESCRIBES VICTIMS membership records. Twice in his report Browder takes note of this phenomenon:

Another reason for the purge is indicated by Browder elsewhere in his report, namely, that all criticism of the reactionary, pro-imperialist policy the Stalinist leadership made by discontented party members, is to be discredited in advance as the work of spies and informers. Here too the Kremlin technique is being copied to the letter, and any party member who dares henceforth express his disagreement with the almighty party bureaucracy and its policies will be subject to immediate expulsion as a "Trotskvist-Lovestoneite spy and wrecker' -to use Browder's own terms

"Their (the "Trotskvist" and 'Lovestoneite" "spies and prohunt" which is now on in the vocateurs") main occupation is open, is to find scapegoats for furnishing 'revolutionary' reathe debacles of the Browder sons for the performance of reactionary deeds. OF THE PURGE

That there is dissatisfaction with the official Stalinist line-"As our Party membership pro-war, pro-Roosevelt, antiapproaches the 100,000 mark, revolutionary - may be gathwe have noted a slackening of ered from the way in which the rate of growth. Their special purpose, besides furnishing employers and police with 'evidence,' is to exert influence upon the activities of the Party toward sectarianism; to create an atmosphere of conspiracy and suspicion, to appear them selves as 'spy hunters'." That the purge is not directed at the occasional real stoolpigeon, and not even only at discontented rank and filers. but also and perhaps primarily at prominent party officials, is also made clear by Browder. Just as Stalin had to have men like Zinoviev and Bukharin presented as "enemies of the people" for a period of time dating back to the Bolshevik revolution and even before that Browder, on his own pettier scale, is framing up his present colleagues, unnamed for the time being, as "wrecking agents" for the past twenty

In his report he hints broadly that the leadership of the Communist Party as far back as 1922-that is, nineteen years ago-was composed of "clever and subtle wrecking agents' and spies. Added significance is given to these references by Browder's pointing to the fact that such "agents" not only "abound in the trade unions and work among the newer less experienced organizations of the Party," but are also represented in the higher commit tees of the party.

There can be no doubt that the Stalinist party in this counequipped with, political train- so notorious by Stalin in the 'labor violence" and "communistic activities" in the Houston labor movement. This followed directly on the heels of both the C.I.O. and the progressive A.F.L. unions. Houston has had some hard fought strikes: the Coco-cola strike of the Teamsters, the Shell strike of the C.I.O. Oil Workers Union, fair city. the A.F.L. Longshoremen's strikes, the 7-Up strike of the l'eamsters and, recently, the N.M.U. Tanker strike. The courage and endurance of the organized labor movement having proved too much for the bosses, they have resorted to the law courts to stop the rapid organization of Houston.

Pretext and Reality

The immediate excuse for the Grand Jury investigation was the threat of American Can Co. to close its strikebound plant for good, as the small Bewley Mills, where the Teamsters were striking, had done the week before. This old dodge failed to impress the striking members of the C.I.O. Steel Workers Union, but it served as an excuse for the bosses to throw the labor hating press into a panic.

The boss papers, including the "liberal" Scripps Howard Press, carried scare headlines day after day, predicting that Houston would become another "ghost city" like Akron is supposed to be, featuring fantastic statements of the Real Estate Board that "$16,000,000 worth of investments was being driven away from Houston." This forced temporarily onto the back page the very news that gave the lie to the front page propaganda: the continued rise in 1940 building permits (industrial and residential) toward the second million dollars' worth, the fact that Houston is almost the only city in the United States that is building at the 1929 level.

Labor Skates Cowardly The first move of the A.F.L. all pretence of being "pro-Central Trades Council, in which the progressives are in a minority, was to decree that no strike will receive their support unless they are consulted beforehand. This they followed Violence Against Labor Meanwhile the Grand Jury performed an amazing job of glossing over the real cause of violence here, while daily smearing the union movement Frank Hamer, ex-Texas Ranger, and notorious anti-labor deputy, on the pay roll of most of the town's largest concerns, testified concerning the highly intaginary "beef-squads" imported from Chicago for various strikes, but entirely over looked the role of the notorious men, commissioned by the state government, whom the companies hire at the first threat of a strike to "protect their property." These company police have followed, in strike after strike, the worst traditions of their kind, by provoking violence in order to hold heir jobs longer. They have even offered to pay strikers to continue to "stir up disturbances.

Workers, beaten up by bosses thugs are refused the right to file charges in the city courts Notices are left on the doors of union members warning them to "get out of town." Bondsmen have been stopped from bonding union men.

Mayor Leads Pack

Mayor Holcombe, elected last fall as "labor's man." with the endorsement of most of the C.I.O. and A.F.L. unions secured by the Stalinist stooges and old line labor leaders, has taken the lead in this vicious anti-labor campaign. A true boss politician, as soon as the bosses needed him he dropped

He also charged that a certain firm of labor lawyers - Mandell and Combes-who are retained by the Teamsters and C.I.O. unions, were responsible for the violence. This is a joke to those who know the real role of these legal parasites on the labor movement. They have done everything in their power to keep the workers from militant action by raising the fear of boss injunctions on each and every occasion, and by encour aging them to put complete confidence in the N.L.R.B. and the "liberal" Holcombe administration

Some Additional Comments On Earl Browder's Report

Elsewhere in this issue is reported the purge that has been going on quietly in the Communist party for some time and is now openly proclaimed in Earl Browder's report to the party National Committee early in May.

There is one part of Browder's report, however, which is so sensationally important and at the same time so deliberately obscured by its author, that it deserves and requires elaboration. Speaking of "spies" who "are always 'more revolutionary' than the Party leadership," Browder adds:

"A historical example was the government police agent, Morrow, who was sent to the Bridgeman Convention of the Communist Party in 1922, and cast the deciding vote between the two equal factions that deadlocked the convention. Those two factions, as we learned later, were the work of more clever and subtle wrecking agents, who came to blossom later as the Trotskyites and Lovestoneites, who were not cleaned out of the Party until 1928-1929. Since that time, this type of agent has had a more difficult job, but they abound in the trade unions and work among the newer, less-experienced organizations of the Party."

"We know that some of them ("spies") have been or are members of state committees or work in state office technical staffs; some are found in section leading committees. This knowledge is the result of intensive investigation by the National Committee, without engaging the whole Party membership or even the leading cadres in a spy hunt."

Who Will Be the Victims?

Those familiar with the gradual but inexorable manner in which Stalin, starting with obscure figures, ended up with men like Zinoviev, Bukharin and Rakovsky, will not fail to recognize the stereotyped pattern disclosed by the quoted paragraphs. Those familiar with the history of the Communist Party in the United States will not fail to recognize, in Browder's anonymous references, the names of the victims slated for the American

The first victims of the Stalin murder-bund following the death of S. M. Kirov were, it will be recalled, obscure and for the most part unnamed young communists in Leningrad. Zinoviev and Kamenev merely bore the "moral responsibility" for Kirov's assassination. Only later were they charged with directly plotting and organizing the killing of the Leningrad party boss. And still later. Zinoviev, Rakovsky, Bukharin and Trotsky had the origins of their crimes located at the very dawn of the revolution, which, considering the names of the men involved in these charges, "proved" that the Bolshevik Revolution was organized and led by a gang of German and British

Following the same procedure, Browder now presents the "Trotskyists and Lovestoneites" who have been counter-revolutionists and spies since they were expelled in 1928-1929, as having been spies and "more clever and subtle wrecking agents" as far back as 1922. And since it must have required some time before the convention to organize their "wrecking" they must have been at it for two or three years before 1922, that is, at the very birth of the Communist Party in the United States

But more important, for the moment, is the selfevident fact that not all the leaders of the "two equal factions that deadlocked the convention" are expelled and triply-accursed Trotskyists and Lovestoneites. Many of them, and not the least important of those days in 1922 at Bridgeman, continue -"clever and subtle wrecking agents" that they are!-to occupy commanding posts in the Communist Party leadership today. And it is theyand not Cannon or Lovestone-whom Browder has in mind when he utters these ominous sentences,

A Few of the Men Involved

Who are the men involved in this "historical example"? Here are a few of the leaders of the two 1922 factions which, "as we learned later" (When? From whom? Who confessed?) "were the work of more clever and subtle wrecking agents.'

There was William Weinstone, first New York and more recently Detroit party commissar; William Z. Foster, still chairman (as we go to press) of the Communist party; William F. Dunne, about whom so very little is heard nowadays; Max Bedacht, boss of the International Workers Order: the two New York state party sachems, Israel Amter (a violent opponent of the Comintern decision in favor of a legal party in 1922—looks bad for him!) and Charles Krumbein; Herbert Benjamin (is he referred to in Browder's remark about "their main fields of work are in mass organizations of a progressive character"?); Alexander Bittelman, one of the fiercest factionalists of them all, and without doubt a British spy from that day to this; Alfred Wagenknecht, removed only the other day as St. Louis organizer of the C.P. (already! Remember Yagoda!); and last but far from least, BROW-DER HIMSELF!

Now, if the two factions of 1922 were the "work of more clever and subtle wrecking agents," are we going to be so gullible as to believe that Browder, who led one of the factions, was only an innocent victim of the wreckers? To be sure, he will protest that he was guiltless and didn't know the foul ends he was being used for; so also, when their time comes, will Foster and Bittelman and Minor and Amter and God knows who else. But who will believe them? Didn't they all protest their innocence at first in Moscow-only to "confess the truth" in the end?

Fortunately for Foster and/or any of Browder's other intended victims, the "General Secretary" in this country does not have at his disposal all of Stalin's means for extorting confessions which Krivitsky describes in such horrifying detail in the current Saturday Evening Post. Browder has no armed bands of G.P.U. assassins, no private prisons, no concentration camps, no Siberia, no cemeteries for the recalcitrants. He only has a powerful machine for lying and the power of expulsion from

But these two weapons he intends to use to the full. Foster, Weinstone, Dunne, Wagenknecht, Amter and Co. cannot possibly have any illusions on that score. Haven't they already used them against others?
