Wage Freeze Wage Freeze Union Leaders Blast Industry Profiteers Negroes, Powell Says

Vol. XVI - No. 32

By T. Burns

LONDON, July 2 - One of the biggest issues in England today is British labor's struggle for higher wages against the wagefreeze policy of the Churchill government. Wage demands already in negotiation affect some nine million workers - one-half of the laboring force of the entire country. These include such key industries as the engineers, miners, railroad men, longshore men and agricultural workers.

This movement has been directly caused by the sharp increases in the cost of living. Prices of food, fares and other essential items in the family budget have been going up since American standards. The average metal worker brings home about $22 a week. Most working class

The British workers are all the cause of their general hostility to Churchill's policies. His government is trying to hand the nationalized industries back to private owners, and has lightened BALANCE POWER taxes on the rich while imposing new charges on the Health Service of the people. They further feel that the government refusal to give any wage increases is bound up with the maintenance the rearmament program which the workers oppose.

Harlem Congressman Hits Own Democratic Party on Rights Plank

NEW YORK, Aug. 3 - Representative Adam Clayton Powell Jr. (Dem., N. Y.) today declared that the Negro people had been "sold down the river" at the Democratic as well as the Republican conventions. Capitalism and War

Capitalism did not always breed war. Toward the close of the Nineteenth Century, when the rising capitalist system triumphed over the outlived feudal order, the capitalists marched forward under the banner of peace. As a matter of fact, they needed peace in order to consolidate their gains, to start the expansion of the productive forces, to build up the internal markets within the newly established national frameworks.

This epoch saw the rise of Great Britain, France and Germany as the great world powers. This epoch gave rise to illusions of gradual but steady progress, of lasting peace and prospects of prosperity. By the first decade of the Twentieth Century this bubble burst.

Capitalism itself had undergone profound changes. The unparalleled expansion of productive forces was accompanied by ever larger concentrations of capital in fewer and fewer hands. Monopolies were born. Industrial capital Russell regarding one of his this county, but we are not allowlost its supremacy, or more accurately it fused with banking capital. This new and highest form of capital, finance capital, fusing with the capitalist state, set new reactionary forces loose in the world. Requiring the world arena for their operation, the monopolies vied with one another for markets, for sources of raw materials, for new areas of investments.

But the rise of monopolies found the world already divided among a handful of dominant powers. Hence stemmed the need to redivide the already divided world. This my mind. I really enjoyed your could be done only by force of arms, and the turn of the century found the dominant European powers turning to militarism, building up their military forces for the coming showdown.

The first of the global wars came in 1914-18. It served notice to mankind that capitalism and war had become indivisible. Vast military expansions and explosions had become inseparable from production on a capitalist basis. The interval between World War I and World War II demenstrated how impossible it was for capitalism to function without diverting the major part of the forces of production to arms output, in preparaton, naturally, for another projected global war.

This organic need for arms production to even keep the outmoded system running was obscured by the fact that it was the German fascists who launched the arms race in the late Thirties. The "peace-loving democracies" needed the arms race - and the war - no less urgently than did their trigger-happy fascist rivals.

The huge war program was the only thing that pulled American capitalism out of the ten-year old depression. The postwar developments have served to underscore this grimmest of truths. The only thing that has averted an economic bust in the U.S. has been the stepped-up arms program. It is openly admitted in ruling capitalist circles, here and abroad, that even a moderate scaling down of the American arms program carries with it a threat of depression.

Catastrophic depression or global war — that is the ONLY ALTERNATIVE that capitalism has to offer man-

British Fear World Slump in 1953

A widely-held view in Europe is that 1953 may well mark the beginning of a world depression, barring the outbreak of global war. The Bevanite periodical Tribune, which expresses the views of the left wing of the British Labor Party, published on June 13, a study by Dudley WXYZ on Sunday night. Seers, entitled "How Near Is the World Slump?": -

"So far as one can ever be sure of any prediction in economics one can be sure of this: there are really only two possibilities for 1953, a world war or a world slump.

"It is true that the American economy may keep running at nearly full capacity for weeks or months, since arms expenditure is rising by over 10 billion dollars a year. But sooner or later, a collapse must come. Even if the Americans could continue to find some use for their national output on the present level (roughly $300 billion). they cannot indefinitely find a use for the sort of things now being made."

The tremendous expansion of the productive capacity, especially, for steel, electricity and oil — at rates far above However, I shall listen to as many prewar peaks — is singled out as one of the factors bring- as possible. ing depression closer:

"Now, we don't need to assume that purchases by the U.S. government will actually fall," explains the Trihune article. "Suppose that they merely ceased to increase and such a levelling off is indeed intended for 1953. Then American industry will be able to fulfill its defense orders without installing more machinery. There would be unemployment in the industries making machinery and in the industries which sell to them, such as the steel industry. The people thrown out of work would buy less themselves, industries making consumer goods would find their fac- I've had to bring them up, betory capacity ample or even excessive, and the sales of plant and machinery would fall further, creating still more unemployment. The recession would, therefore, spread over the nation and over the Western world."

What concerns the Europeans is that the repercussions of even a "mild" depression in the U.S. may prove too much for the shaky European economies.

"But a mild recession (in the U.S.) could still be I have to live, believe me, you enough to shake the economic structure of the West. We would know why I have never have already seen in 1949 the effects of a very mild U.S. recession, and in the last few months the consequences of what is merely a cessation of stockpiling. The American | read and enjoy more thoroughly. economy now has so dominant a position in the world that a tremor in New York may mean a landslide of prices and incomes in other cities.

The author's conclusion is that "we must exert what power we can on the United States to encourage the adoption of economic policies that will make the slump less likely, or reduce its scale."

I lectured for many years and followed the electrical trade and am still able to do a good day's work, age 70 past. I regret that I am much disannointed in the bringing about of Socialism. I thought after reading Edward Bellamy's books it was so ideal that every one would accept and by 1925 or 30 we would have Socialism. But it has been defeated by wars. But this one to come will finish off the capitalist system. I feel it is digging its

Finds Dobbs' Ideas 'Quite a Challenge'

Dear Mr. Dobbs:

The views you presented this afternoon on NBC were provocative. I found in them quite a challenge to the dogmatic. provincial attitude maintained by Cleveland's Plain Dealer editors. If I cannot agree with everything you said, I most certainly can't stomach the drivel which the Plain Dealer editors grind out every day. Harry T. Moore

The July issue of Fortune magazine contains an article, "Negro Employment: A Progress Report," by John A. Davis, professor of political science at Lincoln University and holder of a grant of money from the Ford Foundation to study and write in the field of civil rights.

As might be expected, the Fortune article is directed to employers, not to Negroes or to their natural allies in the struggle for equal rights, the working class. Consequently, his use of the statistics on Negroes in industry is aimed at making the following points:

- 1. There has been "an uneven but advancing line of progress" in the employment of Negroes on a non-discriminatory basis in the last decade.
- 2. "These advances were possible because in many instances enlightened management" took the lead in abolishing discrimination in its plants.
- 3. The problem, therefore, is not whether progress is being made, but whether it is being made fast enough. "In a world that is about 65 per cent non-white the Communist charge of racial exploitation in America reverberates with a crashing emphasis," he says.
- 4. More progress has been made where there is fair employment legislation than where voluntary means are employed to eliminate discrimination. In fact, his statistics tell him "The gains in Negro employment were possible only through
- 5. Employers need not fear that FEPC legislation will compel them to do anything they don't want to do. (The Cleveland Chamber of Commerce agreed to a city ordinance in January 1950. "So far there has not been one prosecution." The federal FEPC in four years of operation "handled 13,000 cases. About 5,000 were settled by negotiation, the others were dismissed through lack of jurisdiction, withdrawal of charges, failure to prove a case, etc." The New York commission in 1951 "handled 234 verifiable complaints, of which 128 were dismissed and twelve withdrawn. Only one case was ordered for formal hearings; all the others were settled by conciliation or dismissal.)
- 6. "A large number of labor unions do restrict job opportunities for Negroes" but management can't revise their policies; that's a job for labor and for government. The government has compelled some unions to stop discriminating, but enforcement machinery against employers holding government contracts is lacking.

Those are Davis' main points. He tells the bosses what they will listen to, he thinks: They are the class that can eliminate discrimination in Phila. TV employment. They should do it in the interest of American imperialism's control of the world. They need not fear legislative compulsion because, as the facts demonstrate, it is used only against labor, not against employers. The government, after all, is theirs.

But neither the hard-headed capitalists nor realistic workers will go for it. The bosses, as a station WPEN granted time on class, have no illusions that they will win the war its popular Steve Allison proagainst anti-imperialist movements all over the world by propaganda about the blessings of SWP were Michael Bartell, New American democracy. That's why they are placing their chips on A-Bombs and military might -pure, naked force. Similarly, at home, the white supremacists made it clear this past year that fire-bombs and murder are weapons they don't hesitate to use when legal means are too slow in "keeping the Negro in his place."

Moreover, workers - and that's who Dr. Davis is talking about when he talks about Negroes in industry - know something the learned doctor Allison. did not deduce from his statistics: The gains made in employment were the result, not of the policies of "enlightened management" or even of FEPC, but of struggle by workers under relatively favorable conditions. The bosses needed more workers to exploit in the stepped-up war economy, so the Negro workers increased their demands, and made gains.

But even Dr. Davis' examination of history and statistics show that a longer view, not just the past ten years, reveals such gains are not guaranteed, or secure. They have been won and lost in the past. As long as "enlightened management" has the power to grant concessions, it has the power to take them away.

Only when the workers have the power, and own and operate industry themselves, will permanent gains be made in the elimination of discrimination not only in employment, but in every phases of American society.

tions about the differences between the Socialist Workers Party and other parties, but once the discussion reached the point of characterizing the Smith Act (under which SWP leaders were sent to jail) as a "Gag" Act the discussion sharpened. Professor Janosik objected to the use of the term "Gag" Act claiming that under some circumstances ideas might be proscribed. As a liberal Democrat he was forced to come out against 'the witch hunt now rampant.

The discussion moved from the advantages of a planned economy, and reached its climax on the question of the Korean war. While both Janosik and Steve Allison objected to the characterization of the Korean fight as a fight for independence and opposed the slogan of "Bring the gro delegates and leaders at the boys home now," they were unable to refute them. Their only recourse was to the old bromides "there have always been wars" and "would you want Stalin to come over here?"

The legal suit of the Stalinists did not contest the law in all its aspects.

SWP SUIT

The Socialist Workers Party suit against the law, filed in the Wayne County Circuit court, contests the law in its entirety, including sections dealing with socalled front organizations and its unconstitutional provision making it mandatory for a defendant to testify against himself. The SWP suit is awaiting scheduling on the Circuit court docket.

The majority opinion of the Federal court specifically denies the Communist Party its legal rights and its right to the ballot. Judge Charles C. Simons stated the panel held the law constitutional "only on its face." Many aspects of the law were not
