Hands Off Korean People’s Right To Decide Own Fate!

By John G. Wright

The “unlawful” moves by the United States to keep its military bases active in South Korea serve as a reminder that the Korean people have not yet achieved their goal of an independent and free country. The American military forces in South Korea are a constant threat to the security of both North and South Korea, and they are a source of constant tension and conflict. The Korean people have repeatedly expressed their desire to be free of American intervention and to have control over their own affairs.

The Korean people have fought bravely against American aggression, and they have won several important victories. However, the Korean War has not yet been won, and the Korean people continue to suffer from the effects of American Imperialism.

The United Nations should intervene in the Korean War to stop the American aggression and to help the Korean people achieve their goal of a free and independent nation. The United Nations should use its authority to compel the United States to withdraw its military forces from South Korea and to respect the sovereignty and territorial integrity of Korea.

The Korean people have a right to decide their own future, and the United States should respect their wishes and help them achieve their goal of a free and independent nation.

The Korean people have the right to determine their own destiny and to live in peace and prosperity. The United States should respect their wishes and help them achieve their goal of a free and independent nation.

The Korean people have a right to live in peace and security, and the United States should respect their wishes and help them achieve their goal of a free and independent nation.

The Korean people have a right to live in freedom and prosperity, and the United States should respect their wishes and help them achieve their goal of a free and independent nation.

The Korean people have a right to live in peace and security, and the United States should respect their wishes and help them achieve their goal of a free and independent nation.

The Demand for 'Neutrality in Europe'

By Ernest Germain

The cry for a neutral Europe, which is heard to be resounding with increasing insistence, is nothing more than a liberal demand that the European statesmen, who are primarily responsible for the present state of world affairs, should refrain from any action that might be interpreted as an attempt to influence the final outcome of the conflict in one way or another. The cry for neutrality is based on the assumption that the present conflict is essentially a European one, and that the intervention of any outside power would only make matters worse.

But there is a fundamental flaw in this argument. The present conflict is not essentially a European one. It is a world conflict, and the intervention of any outside power would be justified if it is necessary to prevent the spread of the conflict to other areas.

The cry for neutrality is therefore a dangerous one. It is a cry for the surrender of Europe to the forces of totalitarianism, and it is a cry for the perpetuation of the present state of world affairs.

The call for neutrality is also a call for the abandonment of the Atlantic Alliance. The Atlantic Alliance is a defensive alliance, and it is necessary if Europe is to be protected from aggression.

The call for neutrality is also a call for the abandonment of the United Nations. The United Nations is a world organization, and it is necessary if the world is to be preserved.

The call for neutrality is therefore a call for the destruction of the Atlantic Alliance and the United Nations. It is a call for the destruction of the forces of progress and democracy, and it is a call for the destruction of the forces of totalitarianism.

The call for neutrality is therefore a call for the destruction of the future. It is a call for the destruction of the hopes and aspirations of the people of the world.

The demand for neutrality is therefore a demand for the destruction of the future. It is a demand for the destruction of the hopes and aspirations of the people of the world.

The Fourth of July

By William E. Bohanan

In most American towns and cities in this country during the month of July we are all sur¬ rendering our normal leisure to a celebration, the Fourth of July. For the Fourth of July is an annual reminder that the Fourth of July is a holiday that was born of rebellion. It is a celebration of the rights of man, of the power of the individual to resist oppression, and of the power of the people to change their government if it becomes tyrannical. It is a celebration of the American way of life, of the American spirit, of the American dream.

In Boston, the home of the colonists, the Fourth of July is celebrated with a firework display and a parade. In Philadelphia, the birthplace of the Constitution, the Fourth of July is celebrated with a concert and a fireworks display. In New York City, the birthplace of the Statue of Liberty, the Fourth of July is celebrated with a parade and a fireworks display. In every city and town in this country, the Fourth of July is celebrated with a parade and a fireworks display. It is a celebration of the American way of life, of the American spirit, of the American dream.

On this day, we remember the sacrifices of the colonists who fought for their freedom, the sacrifices of the soldiers who fought for our country, and the sacrifices of the workers who built this country. We remember the sacrifices of the colonists who fought for their freedom, the sacrifices of the soldiers who fought for our country, and the sacrifices of the workers who built this country. We remember the sacrifices of the colonists who fought for their freedom, the sacrifices of the soldiers who fought for our country, and the sacrifices of the workers who built this country.

The Fourth of July is a day of celebration, a day of remembrance, a day of hope. It is a day of celebration, a day of remembrance, a day of hope. It is a day of celebration, a day of remembrance, a day of hope. It is a day of celebration, a day of remembrance, a day of hope.
